Supporting People, Strengthening Communities.

The economy of Central Oregon is booming. Unemployment is at record lows. Wages are rising. Employers are begging for workers. Contractors are busy, trying to keep up with demand for business expansion and new homes. The population is surging, bringing bright young people, new workers and their families, would-be entrepreneurs and retirees looking to spend their gold and their golden years under Central Oregon's golden skies. Sounds amazing, doesn't it?

It is amazing, but having lived in Central Oregon most of my life, I remember that the highs of Booms are inevitably followed by the lows of Busts, and for some people, the Boom times never materialize at all.

Even in the best of times, people find themselves in difficult circumstances through no fault of their own. In these pages, you'll read the story of a grandmother who unexpectedly had to take over raising her grandchildren. NeighborImpact was privileged to be there to help her put things back together in very difficult circumstances. When one of our neighbors found herself in need of a lifesaving organ transplant, she quickly saw her medical bills mount and her finances collapse. The eviction notice on her door just added to her stress. NeighborImpact was able to step in to keep her housed until she could recover and once more start planning her future. Then there's the widow, who scrimped and saved to pay off her mortgage early—or at least what she thought was her mortgage. It was a shock to find out she had more than one mortgage, and only with NeighborImpact's help was she able to refinance and stay in the home she thought she had paid for.

A great economy helps many people, but life still happens. NeighborImpact works every day to help people in danger of being left behind by circumstance. We couldn't do this work without the support of our partners and donors. Thank you. You make a difference, and together we are building toward a day when Central Oregon will be a place where no one is left behind.

Scott Cooper
Executive Director

A Challenging Beginning; A New Start

One Super Bowl Sunday, Vickie Pirisky received news that forever changed her life: the mother of her grandchildren had committed suicide.

Vickie left immediately to pick up her six-month-old twin grandchildren, Aden and Sofia. According to Vickie, "The babies were drug-affected and developmentally delayed because of the environment they lived in."

She began seeking services for the two babies, who now had an opportunity for a new life. The children fell in the fifth percentile for weight, according to their pediatrician. Sofia could not bear weight on her legs; Aden would not make eye contact and pulled away from anyone who tried to hold or feed him.

Then Vickie learned about NeighborImpact's Early Head Start. The program offers weekly home visits by child development professionals, who provide hands-on training to help families promote healthy physical, emotional and educational development of children ages 0 to 3. Each visit provides child-focused activities and promotes a parent's ability to support a child's development.

"I do not know what I would have done without weekly home visits," said Vickie. "I did not realize how much I needed this program." Vickie feels proud to report that the twins have made incredible progress physically, developmentally and socially. Aden is in the 66th percentile for weight; Sofia is now in the 62nd percentile. In the fall, both children will transition to NeighborImpact's Head Start Program. For children and families enrolled in Head Start and Early Head Start, brighter futures await.

Taking to the Road to Feed Rural Residents

In 2017, Carly Sanders, NeighborImpact's Food Program director, had a dream of a mobile food pantry. She pictured a food truck that would travel to remote parts of Central Oregon. The goal? To reach people—regardless of where they live—who struggle financially, do not have reliable transportation to a food pantry, have poor access to fresh food and deal with diet-related health conditions such as diabetes and heart disease.

With grants from St. Charles Health System, NeighborWorks America and Maybelle Clark MacDonald, Carly's dream came true. NeighborImpact bought and converted a diesel delivery truck into a mobile food pantry. Laden with fresh produce and nonperishable food such as beans and rice, the truck debuted in June at Mosaic Medical in Prineville. On the first run, people took home strawberries, oranges, tangerines, tomatoes, carrots, onions, apples and other fresh goods. Called "Fresh to You," this is the area's first initiative that expands on food distribution. As NeighborImpact's first direct food distribution effort, Fresh to You partners with High Desert Food and Farm Alliance to expand the capacity of our food bank. The long-term plan is to expand the program to other rural areas across Central Oregon, reaching persons with food insecurity. "Fresh to You is a way to create greater access to healthy food," Sanders said. "The project meets folks where they are and targets underserved populations." A food pantry that can travel brings food-insecure residents in rural areas a long-needed resource: healthy food, delivered.

Foreclosure Averted: A Widow's Stability Secured

When foreclosure notices started arriving in Faye Rauschenberger's mailbox, she was alarmed. Faye thought she had paid off her mortgage in 2014. The Redmond widow had worked hard to pay off the loan, even making extra payments to fulfill that goal. Since she was approaching retirement, she planned to rely on this major asset for financial stability in her later years. With her home and finances in jeopardy, Faye did not know what to do.

Luckily, Victoria Vale, a homeownership counselor for NeighborImpact's HomeSource program, got to the bottom of the problem. In 2008, Faye and her husband had taken out a second mortgage on their home, with the idea that they would build another house. Unfortunately, the building plans fell through, and the couple subsequently declared bankruptcy. Victoria soon discovered that this second mortgage, a home equity line of credit, was not paid off and had not been eliminated during the ensuing bankruptcy. Instead, the second mortgage kicked in as soon as Faye paid off the first one.

Thankfully, with Victoria as her advocate during the resolution conference, Faye was able to stay in her home. She still had the obligation to pay off the second mortgage, but NeighborImpact helped her craft a budget to make the payments. With NeighborImpact's help, Faye can live in the home she loves, exactly as she had planned.

Representative Payee manages disability benefits on behalf of persons with mental illness or a mental disability by budgeting and dispersing funds to pay for living needs including housing, utilities, food, medical expenses, personal care and clothing.

Community Development helps communities build housing and infrastructure.

Endowment and Planned Giving Information

ENDOWMENT

NeighborImpact partners with the Oregon Community Foundation to handle the distribution and management of the endowment fund. The Oregon Community Foundation is a superb resource for local non-profits in Central Oregon. Not only does the foundation help non-profits build and manage endowments, it also helps individuals direct their charitable funds to local non-profits. For information on contributing to NeighborImpact through the Oregon Community Foundation, contact 541-382-1170

NeighborImpact also created a board-directed endowment that is managed with the help of a local investment firm. This endowment fund doubles as a reserve fund to cover any emergency needs which might develop unexpectedly. NeighborImpact uses directly donated bequest gifts to build our board-directed endowment.

PLANNED GIVING

NeighborImpact's planned giving program builds the board-directed endowment. We accept bequest commitments from our friends. If you have a planned giving question, please contact our development department at (541) 323-6501.

For Seniors, There's No Place Like Home

Wendy Richardson heard about the NeighborImpact's Weatherization services from her grandchildren. A widow who had lived in her home for 38 years, Wendy knew it needed attention, but she could not afford repairs on her fixed income. To make matters worse, her power bill continued to increase dramatically.

Wendy read about NeighborImpact's Weatherization program and decided to apply for services. After a thorough energy audit, the Weatherization team insulated her home, stopped the leaks, serviced her furnace and replaced her wood stove. Her power bills have dropped significantly, and her home is now warm and dry. "No words can express how grateful I am for everything you had done on my home," Wendy said. "I don't believe my home would have lasted another couple of years."

Because of NeighborImpact's Weatherization program, Wendy can continue to live in her home, secure in the knowledge that she can afford her utility bills and maintain her independence. Like many seniors, Wendy's fixed income would not have made a thorough weatherization possible. Thanks to NeighborImpact, she can enjoy many more years in the place she has long called home.

With Help from Lending: Oh, the Places You'll Go!

Martha had a dream: a childcare center that would allow her to expand beyond her home-based business. NeighborImpact has a mission: to expand childcare infrastructure for the Central Oregon region. With the help of a loan from NeighborImpact, the dream and the mission came together in Mia's Sprouts Early Childhood Development Center, a preschool and daycare center in the heart of Redmond.

The loan covered tenant improvements, educational materials, play equipment and furnishings. Despite the acute need for quality childcare in Central Oregon, this was not the type of project a traditional bank would fund. Before coming to NeighborImpact, Martha's only option for finance was charging up her credit card debt and paying a shocking interest rate.

Mia's Sprouts is now a thriving business, helping meet a critical community need and serving twelve children instead of three. There's a waiting list of families eager to enroll their children, and Martha anticipates signing a lease for a larger facility in January 2020. The new facility will double Mia's Sprouts' capacity. Thanks to NeighborImpact's Small Business Loan program, Mia's Sprouts is helping fill the childcare gap in Central Oregon.

Critical Connections When Illness Threatens a Life

In May of 2017, Marie's health took a significant blow. She required an organ transplant to ensure her survival past age 58. More bad news piled up. The nearest transplant program was in Seattle, Marie could not work, had exhausted her savings and had used her rent money for travel expenses getting back and forth between Central Oregon and Seattle.

Marie returned from an urgent visit for evaluation and placement on the transplant list to find an eviction notice on her front door. She looked for assistance in the faith community, to no avail. A manager with the Big Brothers, Big Sisters programs directed her to NeighborImpact for rental assistance options. "I was so embarrassed and stressed that I had to ask for help, but the employees at NeighborImpact made me feel better," Marie said.

To her relief, NeighborImpact's Housing Stabilization staff provided the resources Marie needed to avoid falling further behind. Through the NeighborImpact Elderly Rental Assistance program, she received a rental subsidy for one year. That help allowed her to prioritize her health and travel to Seattle for extensive testing to secure a permanent spot on the transplant list. Marie's Housing Advocate visited with her monthly, offered connections to the Veggie Rx food program and communicated regarding affordable housing opportunities.

"I have been deeply touched by the compassion of the staff at NeighborImpact," she said. "I am so thankful and grateful to NeighborImpact for [the] help and respect [they] have given me." Services and connections at the right time lifted Marie's housing worries while she focused on her health.

NeighborImpact

Supporting People. Strengthening Communities.

Dear Friends,

Every day, people come to NeighborImpact for a little help. No one asks for much. They need enough to carry them through an emergency or beyond emergencies altogether: help with the rent or a utility bill or to avoid foreclosure; basic financial education or homebuyer education or a loan for a down payment. They ask just enough to live well. "Enough" - we all want that.

When they cross our threshold, the persons we serve struggle to contain their despair, their worry and, often, their tears. But, they leave relieved, having had help. Our role is to provide enough to restore stability, confidence, and hope. We can do that because of your support.

This year's Annual Report highlights the value of our work and the results that arose from partnerships with people like you. Something inspired them to care and then to act to help others. Something about crisis and survival that they experienced, saw, read, or heard in a conversation or in a song or in a speech stuck with them. They understand that with the right kind of help, and enough of it, people in crises find their way out. Someone listens, takes their hands and walks them through the fear, the fog, or the dark. Because we come through, donors have trusted NeighborImpact to be that guide.

You and we are united by a desire for a community where everyone can grow and live well. We are bound together by the work ahead of us and by a vision of a future built on hope. Today, I ask that you build that future with us. I ask that you make as generous a donation as you can to give those we serve some relief, some help, and some hope. Just enough.

For the greater good,

Suzette Chapman
Chief Development Officer
